

PIERRE COSTABEL

Leibniz and Dynamics

THE TEXTS OF 1692

Translated by

Dr R. E. W. Maddison, F.S.A.

Librarian of the Royal Astronomical Society

HERMANN: PARIS

METHUEN: LONDON

CORNELL UNIVERSITY PRESS: ITHACA, NEW YORK

Contents

Foreword	7
Introduction	11
Chapter I. From the history of a discovery to the discovery of history	25
Discovery of two Leibnizian manuscripts	25
Identification of the copyist. Character of Des Billettes.	26
Leibniz and dynamics	29
The Leibniz-Pellisson correspondence	31
Circumstances of and grounds for making the copies	34
Failure of the approach to Malebranche	36
Failure at the Académie Royale des Sciences	37
Chapter II. The Essay de Dynamique	40
State of the text. Correction of Foucher de Careil's version	40
The controversy of 1687	41
Consolidation of the Leibnizian concept	48
The Leibnizian categories	53
The logical coherence of the Essay of 1692	56
Kinetic force and potential force distinguished	60
Defect of the Leibnizian concept	63
Conclusion	64
Chapter III. The General Rule for the Compounding of Motions	66
Account of the text. Comparisons and dating	66
The problem of Tschirnhaus	69
Fatio de Duillier's solution	71
Fatio and Huygens	74

CONTENTS

The solution of Huygens	77
The solution of Leibniz	83
The compounding of motions	93
Conclusion	104
Appendix I. Complete version of the Essay de Dynamique by Leibniz in 1692	108
Appendix II. Synoptic comparison of the two texts of the General Rule for the Compounding of Motions	132
Name index	137
Subject index	138
Bibliography	140