

CONTENTS

ACKNOWLEDGMENT . . . . .	p.	VII
PREFACE . . . . .	»	IX
FOREWORD ON A. RIEGL BY ROLF WINKES . . . . .	»	XI
APPENDICES TO FOREWORD . . . . .	»	XXV

TRANSLATION

FOREWORD TO ORIGINAL EDITION . . . . .	»	3
INTRODUCTION . . . . .	»	5

Plan and division of the work. - Justification for the inclusion of all other fields in the visual arts of the late Romans for the description of the late Roman art industry. - The previous neglect of late Roman art and the reasons for it. - First attempts at clarification of the « unclassical » phenomenon in late Roman art. - Riegl's « Stilfragen ». - The so-called « Semper theory » and the Kunstwollen. - Wickhoff's « Genesis ». - Late Roman art as a necessary transitional phase between ancient and modern art. - Justification of the term « late Roman art ». - Chronological determination for the late Roman art period. - Organization of the material and the sequence of chapters. - Character of the task and inherent difficulties for its solution.

I. THE ARCHITECTURE . . . . .	»	19
-------------------------------	---	----

Centralized and axial buildings. - Innovation in late Roman architecture: creation of space and mass composition. - The original aversion to deep space in antiquity and its reasons. - The three phases of development in ancient art and the increasing emancipation of space. - The relation to space in the architecture of the ancient Egyptians, the classical Greeks, the post-classical Greeks, the centralized building. - The axial building of the Roman Empire. - The forum basilica not an enclosed interior space. - The enclosed halls of the baths as actual interior spaces. - The christian basilica not a monumental interior space. - East and West Roman architecture. - The Roman centralized building, the Greek temple and the Gothic church. - Architectural decoration. - The coloristic Kunstabsicht. The infinite rapport.

II. THE SCULPTURE . . . . .	»	51
-----------------------------	---	----

Raw material and technique. - The Constantinian reliefs. - Antecedents in the development of the relief in antiquity. - The Old Kingdom relief. - The classical relief of the Greeks. - The hellenistic relief. - The Augustan, Flavian, and Trajanic relief. - The importance of line in hellenistic and Roman imperial art. - Fernsicht and the increasing appeal to the Erfahrungsbewusstsein in the art of the early Empire. - Cycles in representations. - The dominance of draped figures. - The rise of disproportion and its reasons. - Relief during the middle Empire. - Portrait sculpture, Commodus, and Decius. - Decorative reliefs with receding background. - The development of sarcophagus sculpture from Marcus Aurelius to Constantine. - Diocletian reliefs. - The sarcophagus of Constantina, of Helena, of Junius Bassus, and Anicius Probus. - The sarcophagus from St. Paul's Outside the Walls. - Other early christian sarcophagi in Rome. - Sarcophagus, sculpture in Ravenna. - The funeral relief from Salona. - The silver casket from San Nazaro in Milan. - Ivory reliefs of 4th century A.D. - Sculpture from the 4th century A.D. - Consular disptychs of the 5th and 6th centuries A.D. - Late Roman relief in the time after Justinian. - The Byzantine problem. - East Roman reliefs. - Coptic reliefs.

III. PAINTING . . . . . P. 133

Difficulties of a definitive treatise of late Roman painting. - Late Roman mosaic. - Its colorism. - Mosaics from Santa Costanza, from Santa Pudenziana, and from Santa Maria Maggiore. - Objectivity, typology, and axiality. - The mosaics from San Vitale in Ravenna. - Late Roman book illuminations. - The Vatican Virgil number 3225257. - The Vienna Genesis. - The Vienna Dioscorides.

IV. THE ART INDUSTRY . . . . . » 147

Metal works and the proper techniques for their coloring. - Perforated works. - Complimentary motifs. - The development among perforated works of the 4th and 5th centuries A.D. - Parallel development among fibulae. - Perforated works of 6th and 7th centuries A.D. - The cuneiform incision. - Its coloristic Kunstabsicht. - Its motifs. - Animal figures in works with cuneiform incisions. - The development of the buckle. - Statistics for finds with cuneiform incisions. - Chronology of the cuneiform incision. - Punched works. - Glasses with hollow ground and engraved decorations. - Garnets in gold cloissons. - Their nature and Kunstabsicht. - Polychromy and colorism. - Mass composition. - The Mediterranean non-barbaric origin for gold cloissons with garnets. - History of gold cloissons with garnet. - Its beginnings. - Enamel. - Egyptian and Greek enamel. - Red enamel. - Roman enamels. - First group. - The flask from Pinguento. - More examples from England, from the Rhine. - The changing ground. - Second group. Third and fourth group. - Mediterranean origin of the « Roman » enamel. - Later fate of gold cloissons with garnets among the Mediterranean peoples. - The Visigothic crowns. - The colon-shaped ornament. - The gold cloissons with garnets and their transition to the Barbarians.

V. THE PRINCIPLES OF THE LATE ROMAN « KUNSTWOLLEN » . . . . . » 223

Characteristics of late Roman art common and not common with antiquity. - Literary remarks of the late Romans about the character of their Kunstwollen. - St. Augustine. - Parallels between the fine arts and the Weltanschauung in antiquity from its beginnings until its concluding late Roman phase.

ANNOTATIONS BY ROLF WINKES. . . . . » 235

BIBLIOGRAPHY . . . . . » 251

GLOSSARY . . . . . » 253

INDEX TO FIGURES. . . . . » 257

INDEX TO PLATES . . . . . » 261

PHOTOGRAPHIC CREDITS. . . . . » 263